

PHOTOGRAMMETRIC ENGINEERING and REMOTE SENSING

Volume XLIV

April 1978

Number 4

COVER PHOTO — Every night all over the world near local midnight, a 500-mile high polar-orbiting Defense Meteorological Satellite “sees” and records the view below. The night of July 13, 1977 was no exception. On this night, there was a marked difference in the usual picture of the east coast of the United States. New York City was undergoing a massive power failure. The lightless area was vividly depicted on the nighttime visual image received by the USAF Air Weather Service’s Satellite Receiving Station at Cape Canaveral, Florida at 1 A.M. on July 14. Photo submitted by Henry W. Brandli of Melbourne, Florida. (See page 503)
